WEDDING GUEST SUES LYONS.

ARRESTED AFTER SUPPER IN THE BOWERY RESTAURANT.

Lively Party, and All of 'Em Were Jugged -Davis, Who Says He Was Sober, Wants $5,000—Bridegroom Drank the Most, "of Course"-Mike Lyons's Version

The story of a wedding supper given at Mike Lyons's restaurant on the Bowery on Decoration Day, 1900, was retold yesterday at the trial before Supreme Court Justice Cochrane and a jury of the suit of Moss Davis against Lyons to recover $5,000 for false arrest.

The supper was in honor of Jack O'Brien's second marriage. O'Brien had worked as a waiter for Lyons for some years and the wedding party of nine wound up in the Eldridge street police station when Lyons failed to collect the $42.50 due him. Next morning they were discharged on O'Brien's promise to make good the bill.

Davis, describing the supper, said that they first had six or seven cocktails, with clams on the half shell, then some fish and "red wine," then some steak and champagne to top off the meal. "Who ordered the courses?" Davis was asked.

"I don't know," he answered, "but I know I didn't. I'm a married man, and coming along half past 10 I started to make a break for home. I went up to the cashier and offered to pay for my share and that of a friend with a $10 bill, but he wouldn't have it that way, and Lyons told us that a big cloak on which they had piled several unless the bill was all paid we'd be arrested.
O'Brien didn't have enough money, and after some argument we were all bundled into a patrol wagon and locked up. Next morning I was discharged as innocent with the other guests by Magistrate Crane."

Davis said he wasn't drunk. Mrs. Katie Chase, bridesmaid, testified that she saw some wine on the table but that she "never touched a thing." "I wouldn't know a cocktail if I seen one," she added.

"O'Brien," she explained," was getting kind of sleepy. Of course, being the groom he drank more than the rest."

When 'the plaintiff's case was closed Mike Lyons took the stand.

"I've been in business at 259 Bowery since 1871," he began, "and I never had a similar occurrence to this one happen in all those 32 years. I was sitting eating unless the bill was all paid we'd be arrested.

similar occurrence to this one happen in all those 32 years. I was sitting eating my supper that night when suddenly the door bursts open and in rushes a tall woman with a bridal veil on, at the head of a big party. I asked Wright, my head waiter who they were, and he told me it was Jack O'Brien's wedding supper. First they had about sixteen cocktails, and then they had claret and by-and-by it was wine. Davis drank some of everything, and he seemed to be doing most of the ordering. "When they had got through the claret and by-gan on the wine," continued Lyons, "they got more lively. Three or four of the men started kissing the bride, and ran around the table, throwing their arms about the ladies' necks and kissing them all. It was a regular kissing bee, in fact.

about the ladies' necks and kissing them all. It was a regular kissing bee, in fact.
"So when I saw that they were going too far I told the waiter not to serve them any more, and he came along with the bill for $42.50, reasonable enough for what they'd had. Well, the language they used then was the vilest I ever heard. When Davis punched Wright, the waiter, I broke in on the scene.

in on the scene.

"After that there was a mix-up and Wright, who'd been held up against the ice box by Davis, started out for a cop. Two policemen finally marched them all out to a patrol wagon. Wright lodged a complaint against them for disorderly conduct and violating the hotel laws, and next morning O'Brien promised to pay, and they were all let go. I got the money a long time afterward through Wright."

Dudley M. Mills, who had been to a Christian Endeavor picnic and had brought two ladies to Lyons's to show them "the lower East Side," corroborated Lyons's story.

The trial will continue to-day.

Father and Dumb Mother Intercede Mrs. Alice Fergus, who lives at 148 Eighth avenue, caught a burglar yesterday morning by sliding down the balustrade in her Mrs. Fergus was in bed half asleep at 9:30 o'clock yesterday morning when she heard a rattling at the door of her room.

She jumped up and ran into the next room, where she found two men crouching over valuable articles With a shriek she rushed at them, and they fled. One of them grabbed up a sealskin sack as he ran.

Mrs. Fergus was equal to the occasion.

She jumped astride of the balustrade and reached the newel post before the two men were half way down, and when they reached the door they were shocked to find a woman in her night dress against it. One of them knecked her down, but she scrambled to her feet and clutched a man in the semi-darkness. The other man dis-

Mrs. Fergus's screams brought George Yates, the janitor, and his wife, and the three managed to hold the prisoner until Policeman James Carew of the West Twen-tieth street station arrived.

At the station house the prisoner gave his pedigree as Arthur Brockway, 27 years old, of 1265 Washington avenue, a telegraph operator. He said that he was employed at the East 161st street station of the elevated railroad.

When he was arraigned in the Jefferson Market police court Mrs. Fergus, who gave her occupation as a "business woman," gave a business like account of her ad-Brockway said in his own defence that he was visiting a family on the second floor and that Mrs. Fergus had mistaken him for one of the burglars as he was going downstairs. He was held till the afternoon in order to get the janitor and his wife and the family Brockway said he was visiting,

They did not appear, but when Brockway was arraigned for the second time Mrs. Fergus stepped up to the Magistrate and said:

"Your Honor, this is a very sad case.
This man's blind father has been to visit me, with his mother, who cannot speak, and I feel profound pity for him."

"It is possible, is it not," said the Magistrate, "that his story may be true, and that you may have mistaken him for another man?"

man?"

Mrs. Fergus was very sure that her statement was true, but did not wish to prosecute.

"Young man," said the Magistrate, "I will discharge you, but this ought to be the lesson of a lifetime to you. Mrs. Fergus is doing a most magnanimous act, and I want you to shake hands with her and thank her for it."

Brookway extended his hand, and mum.

STILL HAD STOLEN WATCH. Pelz Didn't Lose It, but McMahon Is Sent

Up for the Theft of It. For transferring the gold watch of Edward Pelz, a bookkeeper of 130 East Sixty-second street from Mr. Pelz's left waistcoat pocket to Mr. Pelz's right trousers pocket, Joe Barnes, whose right name is William McMahon, was sentenced to three years and six months in State prison yesterday by Justice Newburger in the Court of General Sessions. Barnes, who was employed in the publication department of the New York Press, stood beside Mr. Pelz on the crowded rear platform of a Third avenue car one day last fall. Mr. Pelz looked down and saw his watch chain dangling. He at once set up a shout and stretched his arms across the opening at the side of the car to keep any-

STOLE NO PICTURES, ANYWAY.

ARMITAGE MATHEWS'S CLIENT MAKES AN ODD DEFENCE.

uctioneer Toboldt, to Whom Paintings Were Consigned for Sale, Pleads That if He Stole Anything It Was Money Since He Sold the Pictures.

Ex-Alderman Armitage Mathews, secretary of the Republican county committee by grace of the new Odell-Murray combination, appeared in Part IV. of General Sessions yesterday with a remarkable defence for a client who was accused of grand larceny in the first degree. The client was Carl W. Toboldt, an auctioneer of 33 Liberty street.

According to the indictment, Toboldt received last summer from Solomon Johnson, a picture dealer at 239 Fifth avenue, six paintings which he agreed to sell, returning the proceeds or the unsold paintings by a certain time. At the time appointed he delivered neither money nor paintings. He wrote to Johnson, saving that he had sold the pictures but had not been paid Charles F. Doe, lumber manufacturer of for them. Johnson's estimate of the value of the pictures was $3,500.

The District Attorney's office, Assistant District Attorney Train said yesterday, was informed that the pictures had never been sold, but were in a safe deposit company's vaults uptown. Toboldt was therefore indicted for the theft of the pictures.

Toboldt went on the stand yesterday, and under questioning by his counsel testified that he had really sold the pictures and that he had received $2,700 for them. This money, he said, he had spent "to pay his debts." He admitted that he had not told the truth in his letters to the picture dealer. Mr. Mathews then rose and asked for the dismissal of the charges against his client, saying in effect:

client, saying in effect:

"The indictment charges us with the theft of certain paintings. We have stolen no paintings. We have come into court and have freely testified that we sold the paintings, as we agreed to sell them, but that we have not paid the money to Mr. Johnson as we agreed to. Whatever we may have done, we are not guilty of having stolen paintings."

There was no count in the indictment charging the theft of the money paid for the paintings. Assistant District Attorney Train, after commenting cheerfully on the ingenious nature of the defence as set forth by Mr. Mathews, announced that he would ask for the withdrawal of a juror and the

WOMAN'S POOLROOM, HANDY SAYS

The Captain and a Roundsman Break Into a Parler.

On the strength of a letter to Commisioner McAdoo, Capt. Handy of the West Forty-seventh street station has been watching what he says was a women's poolroom at 154 West Forty-fifth street. On Wednesday Capt. Handy sent Mrs. Ellen Reynolds, the station house matron, to get evidence against the place, but she was unsuccessful.

Roundsman Kane of the Rockaway Beach station called on Capt. Handy yesterday afternoon, and the two went to the suspected place and said they wanted to rent a rear room. A young man who met them in the hallway of the house said that them in the naiway of the nouse said that the room was already rented. The cap-tain took a chance and broke open the door leading to the rear room. There, he says, were seven women and three men. One of the latter, the captain declares, was talking over a telephone and taking bets on the races.

n the captain and Roundsman Kane entered two women escaped by the base-ment door. Capt. Handy blocked the way of the others by threatening to shoot. He then allowed all hands to go ex-cept the young man at the telephone, who was taken to the station house in a patrol wagon. The prisoner said he was Charles Herbert of 63 West 117th street. The house where the raid was made is a four story brownstone dwelling. Capt. Handy says it is occupied as a theatrical boarding house and is run by a Mrs.

PULLS DON'T GO, SAYS HAYES. Plain Talk From the Fire Commis to Men Who Shirk Duty.

The arraignment before him yesterday of firemen accused of being absent from quarters without leave moved Commissioner Haves to sav:

"Some of you men seem to think you can shirk your duty and then escape punishment through a pull. Now, we might as well understand each other at the beginning. No man in the department is going to shirk work and escape the penalty for such an offence. Get that notion out of your head, for no kind of a pull will save you from punishment when I find you are not doing your duty."
